5. How we use automated processing or “analytics” & our legal basis

We use automated statistical analysis of the information we collect about you as part of our business

- ▶ Analysis of your information helps us to make automated lending decisions
  - ▶ When you apply for a financial product, for example a loan, we may evaluate the application using statistical analysis to determine whether or not the product best meets your needs.
  - ▶ We may decide whether or not to give you a financial service, for example, a personal loan.
  - ▶ We may calculate the interest rate that we need to charge on a credit product to reflect the risk of lending to you. For example, although your loan may be within sensible risk guidelines, there may be a higher risk (compared to another customer) that you or a guarantor might not be able to repay a loan. If this happens, our analysis of your data may tell us that a higher interest rate is appropriate, compared to another customer, to reflect that increased risk.
  - ▶ To manage existing credit agreements you have with us, such as your Current Account overdraft. For example, when you or any authorised user seeks to perform a transaction, information may be sent to us to evaluate and determine whether to approve, decline or refer a transaction for further review.
  - ▶ To decide the type of financial service suitable for you, or to decide other terms – for example, the minimum amount you need as a deposit when you want buy something financed by us.
- ▶ Further information about the logic behind these automated lending decisions
  - ▶ When you apply for credit, we use an automated system known as credit scoring to determine if you qualify for a loan, the terms of the loan, the interest rate and the credit limits that apply. As credit scoring helps us to assess risk fairly and consistently, it is necessary for entering into our contract with you and helps our Group companies to lend responsibly and comply with our legal obligations.
  - ▶ Your credit score helps us to determine whether you qualify for a particular credit card, loan, mortgage or service. It is based on a range of data, including your borrowing history, your ability to repay the loan and if you have defaulted on a loan previously.

- ▶ Credit scoring generally takes account of information from three sources: (1) information you provide during your application, (2) information provided by credit reference agencies or credit registers, and (3) information that may already be held about you by companies in the Bank of Ireland Group. Our credit scoring system will consider information from these sources to make an overall assessment of your application. The credit scoring methods used are regularly tested to ensure they remain fair, effective and unbiased.

Where we make solely automated decisions that affect you in a legal or a significant way, you have the right to provide your point of view and have those decisions reviewed by a member of our team.

- ▶ Automated analysis of our customer information (including your information) as a whole helps us to manage our business for our legitimate interests. It enables us to:
  - ▶ Make more informed business decisions, including improving the quality of products and services we can offer (including for the purposes of direct marketing, unless you have objected to us using your details in this way).
  - ▶ Test and maintain the stability and performance of our systems.
  - ▶ Carry out long-term statistical modelling, provided that such modelling does not affect any decision we make about you.
- ▶ Automated analysis of your information also enables us for service, administrative purposes and helps us to form a single view of your relationship with the Bank of Ireland Group. This is intended to help us to manage and build our relationship with you and is an important part of managing our business in our legitimate interests.
  - ▶ For example, it enables us to develop personalised information for you in real-time based on your financial and personal circumstances (for example, providing you with information when you log into your account on how to minimise bank charges, or to warn you that your account is running low so you can put it in funds in order to meet a future debit).
- ▶ Automated analysis of your information assists us to comply with our legal obligations.
  - ▶ For example, in connection with our money laundering, fraud and terrorist financing prevention obligations, we may use automated processing to screen for suspicious transactions, or to identify payments which may be subject to international sanctions.
- ▶ There are certain automated analyses of your information that we will only carry out where you have given us your consent (which you can withdraw at any time).
  - ▶ We will only automatically process your information to enable us to undertake the following activities where we have your consent:
    - ▶ Send electronic messages to you about product and service offers from our Group and/or our selected trusted partners.
    - ▶ Share your data with third parties so that they may send you electronic messaging about their products and offers.
    - ▶ Use your transaction history/account information from your Bank of Ireland current account and credit card to identify your spending and saving habits, in order to personalise offers that are exclusive and individual to you, based on your account transactions. We will provide you with more information on this when we seek your consent.
    - ▶ Use your location data to send you information regarding special offers from us or our partners close to your location.
    - ▶ Use sensitive categories of data, as set out in data protection legislation.
    - ▶ Use information you have made public and combine this with the activities outlined above.

- ▶ Companies that provide support services for the purposes of protecting our legitimate interests.
